Hancock County, famous for its sorghum, long ago acquired the reputation as the Sorghum Capital of the World. The festival promotes and highlights the county's sorghum growers and industry. Come prepared to sample and enjoy a vast array of sorghum delicacies and take some home with you. Demonstrations will be taking place all day along with other vendors. You won't leave hungry! Food booths available ranging from funnel cakes, grilled sandwiches to lemon shakeups! Hitch a ride on one of the wagon's or take a stroll through the farmers market. There will also be a wide variety of other craft demonstrations from broom making to wood carving.

"The Independence Bank Sorghum Festival is a way for us to give back to our communities who have always been there for us. Hancock County has put on the Sorghum Festival for many successful years, but the in the last few years have had no one to head the organization of the festival. We have creative ideas and hope the community gets involved in the years to come to help make this a successful event."

Rick Embry
Independence Bank
President, Hancock Co.

All Sorghum producers are invited to produce, demonstrate and sell their sorghum at the festival. The Sorghum Festival will be free admission to the public.
